SESSION WORK

From late 1960's to early 1970's David Byron did a lot of session work mainly for a company called Avenue Records singing lead and backing vocals (there has rumoured that also other Uriah Heep members Mick Box & Paul Newton would have participated in these sessions as musicians but this has not been fully confirmed). These were cover versions of Top20 hits and were released on numerous EP's & LP's at the time. There are over hundred of tracks recorded during these sessions featuring David Byron on lead vocals but these records are extremely rare to find these days.

For 40 years these were available only on the original extremely rare vinyl records but since 2012 Artistry Records has been re-releasing these. There are six CD's so far released.

These tracks have been surfaced in various formats so far from Avenue Records sessions and other sources with Byron on vocals (original performer in parenthesis):

All I Have To Do Is Dream (The Everly Brothers)	It Don't Come Easy (Ringo Starr)
